

KNIFESTYLES OF THE RICH & FAMOUS

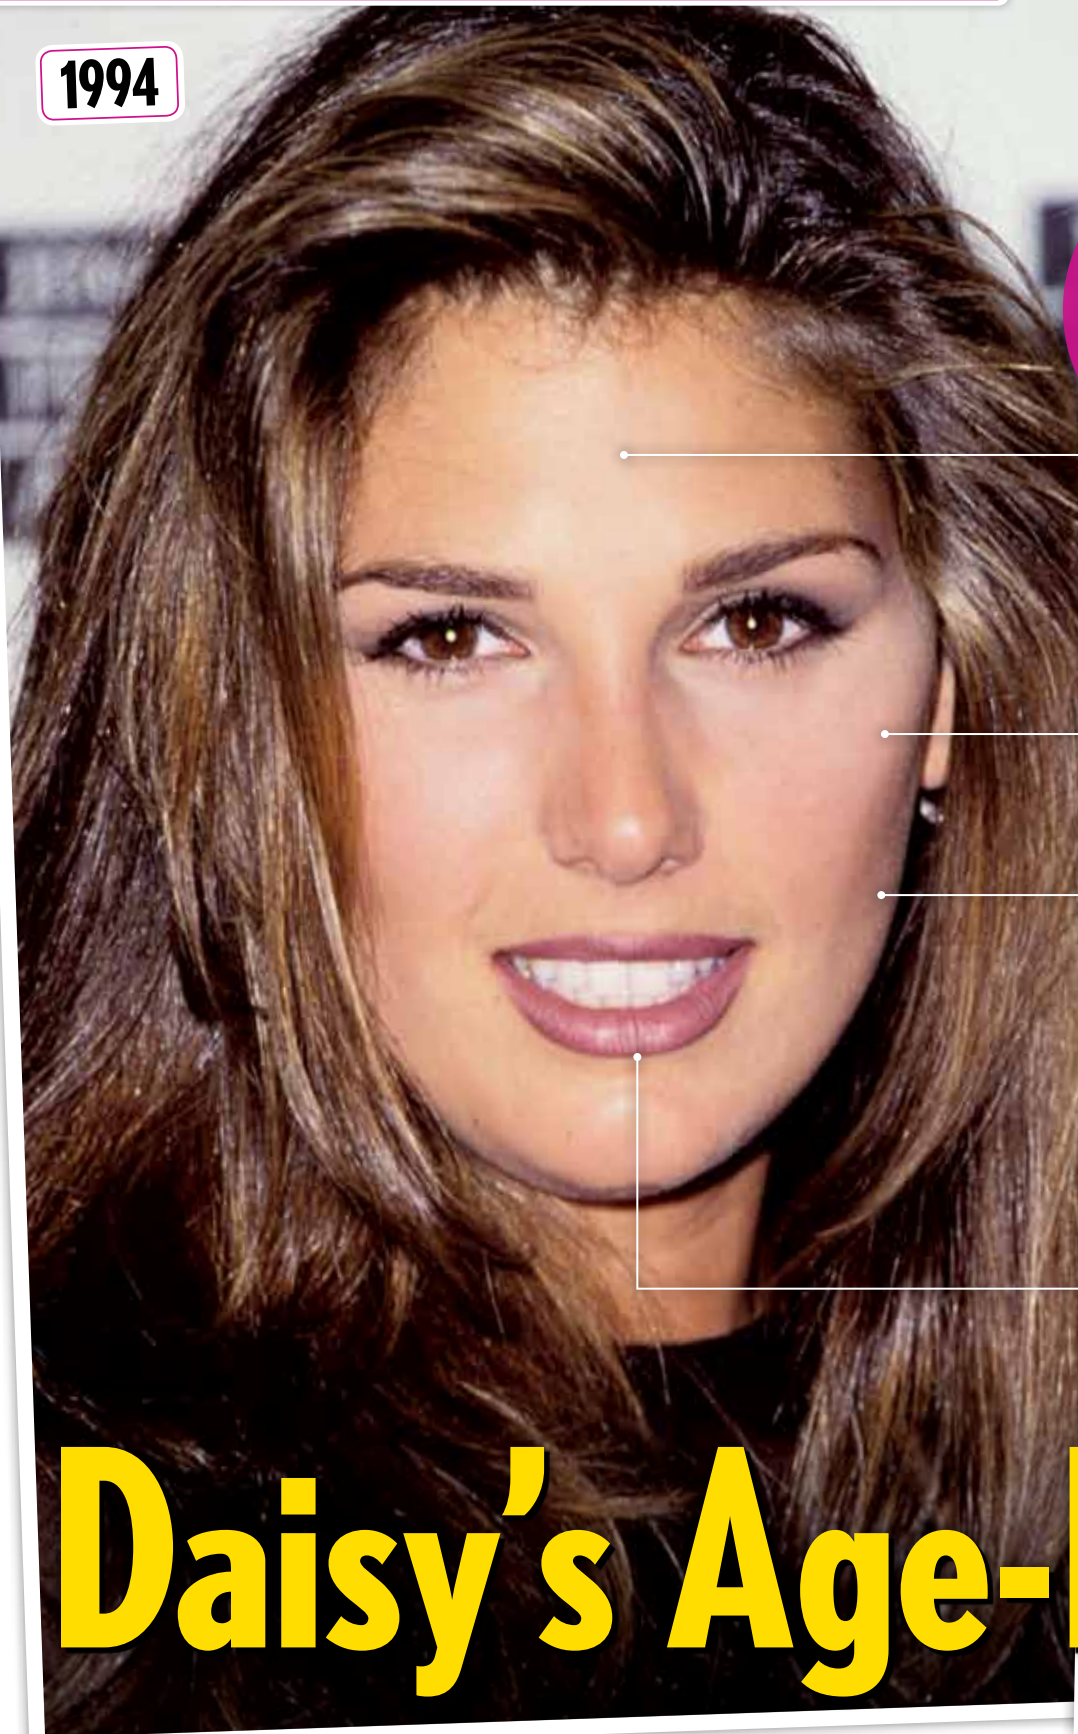

It's hard to believe that Daisy Fuentes, a fixture on MTV in the '90s, is now 50. The first Latina VJ certainly doesn't look it, and she admits to getting a little help in that department. "There's a right time for things like Botox as you get older," she said a few years ago. "As long as you don't go overboard with it, then you're good." The Cuban-American model and TV host has followed her own advice. "She's aging gracefully, she doesn't look overtreated," says laser skin specialist Adriana Martino, who, like the other experts consulted for this story, hasn't worked with Daisy. Board-certified cosmetic plastic surgeon Dr. Josef Hadeed, who thinks Daisy may have had a chin implant and rhinoplasty, agrees. "Whatever she's done, it is certainly subtle," he says. It all comes down to Daisy's philosophy about knowing when to say "when." "So many women in Hollywood change their faces radically, all at one time," says Philadelphia plastic surgeon Dr. Kirk Brandow. "Daisy looks great." LS

"I wouldn't do a thing differently!"

NOW

FOREHEAD

"Her forehead is smooth," observes skin specialist Martino, "free of deep wrinkles and fine lines." How do you look that way at 50? Martino thinks Botox, at $400 to $450 a treatment.

CHEEKS

NYC dermatologist Dr. Gary Goldenberg notes Daisy's face is more full now. "Some of this may be weight gain," he says, "but I believe she's had fillers, too." Cost: $1.2K to $5K.

SKIN

"Her face has very little visible sun damage," Martino notes, adding that a more even complexion can be achieved with laser skin resurfacing. Price tag: $2K to $3K.

LIPS

Dr. Hadeed believes Daisy's had lip fillers, observing that "she previously did not have a well-defined Cupid's bow in her upper lip, but she does have one currently." Injections cost $600 to $1.2K.
